"The first practical movement to institute a Rifle Club, and from its members to raise a Rifle Corps, originated at Cambridge. The movers of this question considered it desirable to form an association for acquiring skill in shooting with the rifle, and for encouraging the enrolment of those members who might be willing to submit to military discipline and to become effective as skilled riflemen for the service of their country if such service should ever be required.

On Saturday, April 30th, 1858, they conferred with the Mayor and some other gentlemen of the University and Town."
