IN MEMORIAM.

PLATTIS.—In proud and loving memory of CAPT. A. L. PLATTIS, 3rd (Infantry) 2nd Bn. Suffolk Regt., killed in Delville Wood, 20th July, 1916.

FISHER.—In ever-loving memory of H. BRIAN FISHER, Lieutenant, M.G.C., who was killed on the Somme, 24th July, 1916.

SEAFORTH HIGHLANDERS.—In proud and honoured memory of the Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers, and Men of the 2ND BATTALION SEAFORTH HIGHLANDERS who gave their lives for their King and Country near Beaumont Hamel on 1st-2nd July, 1916.

Why Fables?

THE headmaster of Shrewsbury School, the Rev. C. A. Alington, who begins work as head of Eton this month, will publish early in the New Year a little book entitled "Shrewsbury Fables." They are addresses he has given in the Shrewsbury School chapel during the last four or five years; but it sounds rather an unfortunate title. Mr. Alington has been remarkably successful at Shrewsbury, and knows the Eton tradition, as he was once a master there; so we may hope for the best. Anyway, he is not likely to mix himself up with European politics.

CAPTAIN J. L. GREEN, V.C.

CAPTAIN JOHN LESLIE GREEN, R.A.M.C., attached Sherwood Foresters, to whom the award (posthumous) of the V.C. was announced yesterday, was the son of Mr. J. G. and Mrs. Green, of Birchdene, Houghton, Hunts. He was educated at Felsted School, Downing College, Cambridge, and St. Bartholomew's Hospital. While at Cambridge he obtained honours in Part I. of the Natural Sciences Tripos (1910) and was a keen sporting man, rowing in many races for his college. He became medically qualified (M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P.) in 1913, but had not quite completed his course for the Cambridge M.B. when on the outbreak of war he obtained a commission in the R.A.M.C. He was at first attached to the 6th South Staffordshire Regiment, then to a field ambulance in France, and lastly to the Sherwood Foresters, with whom he was serving when he met his death.

Capt. JOHN LESLIE GREEN, late R.A.M.C.

For most conspicuous devotion to duty. Although himself wounded, he went to the assistance of an officer who had been wounded and was hung up on the enemy's wire entanglements, and succeeded in dragging him to a shell hole, where he dressed his wounds, notwithstanding that bombs and rifle grenades were thrown at him the whole time. Captain Green then endeavoured to bring the wounded officer into safe cover, and had nearly succeeded in doing so when he was himself killed.

Killed in Action
July 1st 1916.

The wedding of Mr. Ashley Tabrum, second son of Mr. Burnett Tabrum, J.P., of Romford, Essex, and Miss Mary Montague Fordyce, elder daughter of Dr. B. R. Fordyce, of 61, Chesterton-road, was solemnised to-day at St. Luke's Church, Chesterton. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. F. Hind, vicar of Somersham, Hunts, formerly vicar of St. Luke's, assisted by the Rev. W. W. Partridge, vicar-designate. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a frock of ivory satin charmuse, trimmed with French lace and an embroidered net veil which had been worn by her grandmother. She carried a white shower bouquet, and was attended by three bridesmaids—Miss Elsie Fordyce (sister of the bride), Miss Eileen Tabrum (niece of the bridegroom) and Miss Dorothy Govan (of Bridge of Allan). They wore frocks of pale blue georgette, with touches of pale pink, and black velvet picture hats, and carried bouquets of pink carnations. Lieut. A. C. Walker, R.F.A., acted as best man. The bride went away in a navy blue coat and skirt, with natural fish furs, and a hat of dark blue silk beaver. A short honeymoon is being spent in Cornwall.

BREUL.—To the precious and ever-living memory of OSWALD GEORGE FRANK JUSTUS BREUL, M.C., Mons. Star, Lieutenant, Royal Engineers, Commanding A.R. Cable Section, formerly motor-cyclist Dispatch Rider, R.E., attached to Third Signal Company, Third Division, beloved younger son of Professor K. H. Breul, Litt.D., Dr. Phil., and Mrs. Breul, of Cambridge, born Nov. 9, 1895, died Oct. 16, 1917, after over three years' continuous active service abroad. Souvenir Cemetery, St. Omer.

BURNS.—In memory of our beloved son, ISLAY P. BURNS, 2nd Lieut., M.G.A., who fell in the Battle of Nicopol.

BURNS.—In proud and ever-loving memory of my brother, DELAY FRANKLIN BURNS, 2nd Lt., M.C., killed in action on the early morning of 11th July, 1917, in the battle of the Dunes.

HEROIC BRITISH DIVISIONS.

SIR D. HAIG'S HIGH PRAISE.

STIRRING STORIES OF BATTLE SERVICES.

(From Our Special Correspondent.)

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEAD-QUARTERS, APRIL 23.

The 4th Division, now mentioned for gallantry in the enemy's abortive attack on Arras and the Vimy Ridge, did very fine work in this same area a year ago. It was troops of this division which took Hyderabad Redoubt and were the first to fight their way into the defences of Roeux on May 3, and, later, nearly completed the capture of that village on the 12th, which was finished by the 51st Division on the following day. Doubtless memories of those days were with them on March 28 this year, when the Germans came on in their masses against the positions from the Scarpe River northwards, and in my dispatch of March 29, and frequently since, I told of the bloody character of the German repulse and slaughter of the enemy along the front from Bailleul to Fampoux. Not content with this, it was the 4th Division, tired though they must have been, who again inflicted another of the heaviest defeats the enemy has suffered this year in the area of Robecq and Riez du Vinage and along the canal, of which I told in the dispatch published on April 19 and more fully on the following day. I doubt if any division has killed more Germans than has the 4th.

THURSDAY, APRIL 25, 1918.

"ESPECIALLY GALLANT" 4TH.

The Commander-in-Chief has requested the Army Commander to convey his congratulations to the General Officer Commanding and all ranks of the 4th Division on the successful operations carried out by them on the 14th, 15th, and 18th inst., and on the way in which they have succeeded in advancing their line.

"The 4th Division was mentioned in the official tribute by Sir Douglas Haig, which appeared in The Times yesterday, for 'especially gallant' service on March 28, and the operations of April 14, 15, and 18 were also referred to. 'I doubt if any division,' wrote our Special Correspondent on the 23rd inst., 'has killed more Germans than has the 4th.'

RAIDS AND GUNFIRE.

The following telegraphic dispatches were received from General Headquarters in France yesterday:—

10.22 A.M.—A hostile raiding party was repulsed last night in the neighbourhood of Moyenneville, south of Arras.

There was great artillery activity on both sides during the night in the Pacaut Wood sector, north of Hinges. Hostile artillery has also shown increased activity between Locon and Hinges and from the Forêt de Nieppe to Meteren.

7.39 P.M.—We carried out a successful raid last night in the neighbourhood of Beaumont Hamel and captured a few prisoners.

This morning a hostile post north of Meris [south of Meteren] was rushed by our troops and its garrison killed or driven out.

On the remainder of the front there is nothing to report beyond artillery activity on both sides.

FAWCETT.—On the 27th May, 1918, at Southgate House, Ripon, DOUGLAS ELLA, dearly-loved younger daughter of the late CHARLES FAWCETT, of Rawdon, near Leeds, and Mrs. Fawcett, of Ripon, aged 21 years.

BRITISH ATTACKED.

ENEMY CLAIM OF 100 PRISONERS.

The following telegraphic dispatches were received from General Headquarters in France yesterday:—

9.55 A.M.—An attempt made by the enemy yesterday to capture one of our posts north-east of Merris was repulsed by our counter-attack.

We captured a few prisoners and machine-guns last night in the Nieppe Forest sector.

Hostile artillery has been active with gas shell north of Villers-Bretonneux, and has shown activity also about Bueuoy and north of Bethune.

7.50 P.M.—At dawn this morning the enemy launched a strong local attack against our new positions south of Morlanecourt, astride the Bray-Corbis road.

The assault, delivered by a division from reserve, succeeded in carrying our advanced trench lines on a portion of the ground captured by us on the night of July 28-29. Local fighting is still taking place in this area, and a few prisoners have been taken by our troops.

South-east of Robecq, our posts in the Pacaut Wood sector have been further advanced on a front of about 2,000 yards. A few prisoners were captured by us also in this area.

GERMAN report:—

FRONT OF CROWN PRINCE RUPPRECHT.—There has been lively reconnoitring activity, especially in the Scarpe and Aves sections and south of Montdidier, and the evening the firing engagements frequently revived.

Early to-day north of the Somme Württembergers crossed the foremost English line on both sides of the Bray-Corbis road, and brought back about 100 prisoners.—Admiralty, per Wireless Press.

THE "SWITCH" LINE.

The 4th Division, which broke the enemy's attack on the north bank of the Scarpe on March 28, on September 2, in the face of strong resistance, carried the defences of the Droocourt-Queant line, on the left of the Canadian attack south-east of Arras, and on that and the following day captured Etain and Lecluse.

THE TOLL OF WAR.

ESTIMATE OF TOTAL BRITISH CASUALTIES.

Mr. Bonar Law, in a written reply to Mr. Lambert, states that the number of casualties in the Royal Navy resulting from acts of war from the outbreak of war revised to date is as follows:—

Killed.		Wounded.		Untraced Missing.
Officers.	Men.	Officers.	Men.	Officers.	Men.
2,061	20,187	813	4,081	13	8

These figures do not include the casualties of the Royal Naval Division, but include those of the Royal Naval Air Service to April 1, 1918, the date of its transfer to the Royal Air Force. Separate figures for the Dominions are not available.

The approximate number of casualties among all military forces and for all theatres of operations from the beginning of the war revised to date is as follows:—

	Killed.*		Wounded.
	Officers.	Other Ranks.	Officers.	Other Ranks.
British	30,807	466,831	76,132	1,532,552
Colonials and Indians	7,602	168,703	17,125	421,402
Total	38,409	635,534	93,257	1,953,954

673,943 2,047,211

Add deaths presumed on lapse of time

97,000

Missing, at present unaccounted

64,800

Total .. 835,743

* Including died from wounds and died from other causes.

These figures include the casualties of the Royal Naval Division, and also the casualties of the Royal Flying Corps to April 1, 1918.

 It appears from the above figures that the final total of casualties from all causes is:—

2,882,954

The number of casualties in the Royal Air Force from April 1, 1918, to the date of the armistice is as follows:—

Killed.	Wounded.	Missing (including prisoners).		Interned.
		Officers.	Other ranks.
1,551	1,129	2,397	651	1,612
				225
				45
				30

The missing are nearly all prisoners of war who have now practically all been repatriated.

The number of casualties (including members of his Majesty's Forces) due to enemy air raids and bombardments is as follows:—

Killed., .. 1,570 Injured., .. 4,041

INTERESTING WEDDING.

English—Bullough.

An interesting wedding took place at St. Botolph's Church on Wednesday, when Miss Violet M. Bullough, daughter of the late Mr. Charles P. Bullough of Trinity College, and Mrs. Bullough, of 2, Fitzwilliam-road, was married to Mr. H. B. C. English, M.A., of Corpus Christi College and Ardreck, Grief, Perth. There was a large congregation.

The officiating clergy were the Rev. A. W. Goodman (Rector), the Rev. A. H. P. Boughey, and the Rev. C. A. E. Pollock. The service was fully choral. Mr. W. Raynes was the organist, and the hymns sung were "Lead us, Heavenly Father, lead us," "May the grace of Christ our Saviour," and "O perfect love, all human thought transcending." The bride was charmingly dressed in ivory satin, with tulle of Georgette edged with old lace, a train of very old Brussels lace and veil, formerly worn by her mother. She carried a sheaf of arum lilies, and was given away by her uncle, Mr. H. R. Clark, of Trinity Hall, and Lincoln's Inn. The bridesmaids were the Misses Ailsa and Audrey Bullough (sisters of the bride), and they wore dresses of Paris blue crepe de chine and small black satin hats lined with blue and trimmed with violets. Bouquets of violets were carried. Miss Anita Willis, in white muslin frock and mob cap, and Master David Strangways in white "Kate Greenaway" suit, were the train-bearers. The best man was Mr. J. C. Foster.

After the ceremony a reception was held in St. Columba's Hall. The wedding presents were numerous. Mr. and Mrs. English afterwards left for their honeymoon, the bride travelling in a blue cloth coat and skirt, with a silver-grey hat lined with blue.

MARRIAGES.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL THE HON. D. BRUCE AND MISS RAWSTORNE.

At the parish church, Croston, Lancashire, yesterday the marriage took place of Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. David Bruce, Seaforth Highlanders, son of the late Earl and Countess of Elgin, to Miss Jennet Rawstorne, daughter of the Bishop of Whalley and Mrs. Gwilym Rawstorne. The bride's father conducted the service, and was assisted by the Rev. E. H. Kennedy, formerly curate of Croston, and latterly chaplain to the bridegroom's battalion in Germany. Captain George Rawstorne, Seaforth Highlanders, gave away his sister, who wore a gown of white chambray, draped with chiffon and Limerick lace, and an old Honiton lace veil. Her sole ornament was a pearl necklace, the bridegroom's gift. Miss Eleanor Asheton (the bride's cousin) carried the train, and she and the four elder bridesmaids—the Misses Kitty and Marjorie Rawstorne (the bride's sisters), Miss Dorothy Rawstorne (cousin of the bride), and Miss Mamie Bullen—were dressed alike in pale yellow chiffon over white satin, with lace hats. The bridegroom's presents to them were marquise and paste brooches, and they carried bouquets of mauve iris. The Earl of Elgin was best man to his brother.

MARRIAGE OF MAJOR R. MANNING, M.C. TO MISS MARIE BATTEN AT NORTHAMPTON.

The marriage took place very quietly at All Saints' Church, Northampton, this afternoon, of Major Richard Manning, M.C., Royal Bucks. Hussars, second son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Manning, Northampton, and Miss Marie Batten, youngest daughter of the late Mr. C. H. Batten, secretary of the Northampton Gas Company, and Mrs. Batten, of Billing-road, Northampton. Major Manning, who was articled with Messrs. Becke, Green and Stops, joined the Army in the early days of the War and served with distinction in Palestine and on the Western front. He is now being demobilized, and will shortly return to Messrs. Becke, Green and Stops. The bride has done valuable Red Cross work.

The service at the church was conducted by the Vicar, the Rev. G. C. L. Lunt, M.C. The bride was given away by Capt. Neville Batten, Monmouth Regiment, brother of the bride, and the best man was Lieut. A. A. Sydney Villar, a brother officer of the bridegroom.

The bridesmaids were Miss Emsen, daughter of Lieut.-Col. Emsen, D.L., and Mrs. Emsen, and Miss Nina Stewart (niece), daughter of Dr. Donald and Mrs. Stewart. The bride looked charming in her wedding dress of ivory satin beaute, trimmed with silver, her tulle veil being bound with a silver circlet. She carried a bouquet of white flowers. Miss Emsen wore a very pretty dress of mastic silk tulle, embroidered with amber and silver, and a Georgette hat to match. Little Miss Stewart looked very dainty in a Liberty frock of mastic Nevada crepe, trimmed with amber, and a straw hat to match. They carried bouquets of daffodils.

The service was full choral, and Dr. Tyson played appropriate music. There was a large congregation, amongst whom was noticed Major T. E. Manning, Northants. Yeomanry, brother of the bridegroom.

The seating arrangements in the church were made by Mr. W. Graveslock and Mr. G. H. Frecknall.

After the service a reception was held at the home of the bride. The bride's travelling dress was a three-piece gown of putty gabardine, with a satin hat to match.

I send you a copy of the Army Council's Tribute to the work of our V.A.D. Members during the great War. The success of the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St. John has been due to the faithful work of their members of whom we are justly proud, and I should like to add to the tribute of the Army Council, on behalf of the Central Joint V.A.D. Committee, our appreciation and thanks.

Chairman, Central Joint V.A.D. Committee.

"The Army Council announce that they desire to convey to all members of Voluntary Aid Detachments, who have worked so hard and with such devotion, their appreciation of the valuable help unstintingly given by those detachments during the long and trying period through which the country has passed.

The work that has been done by each and all, it is declared, has been of the utmost assistance to the great cause for which the Allies have been fighting for the past four and a half years. The keenness, self-sacrifice, and devotion to duty displayed at all times and in all circumstances have been most marked, and without the help of these workers the difficulties regarding the furnishing of adequate care and attention to the sick and wounded would have been immensely increased. The calls made on the members of the V.A.D.s have been many and various, but they have invariably been met with the utmost ability, tact and goodwill.

The Army Council, it is added, feel a deep sense of gratitude to these devoted helpers in the great cause of humanity."

SHAKESPEARE WITH PURCELL'S MUSIC.

REVIVAL OF THE "FAIRY QUEEN."

(FROM OUR MUSIC CRITIC.)

CAMBRIDGE, Feb. 10.

Purcell's opera, The Fairy Queen, was given at the New Theatre to-night for the first time since 1803, when, two years before his death, Purcell added considerably to the scope of the work produced a year previously. Its revival now at Cambridge has naturally aroused considerable interest, and the theatre was crowded for the first performance. Performances are to be given every night this week, with a matinee on Saturday. As Purcell's work takes the form of a number of fairy masques originally more or less loosely attached to a 17th century garbled version of the Midsummer Night's Dream, the most difficult problem has been to decide on a method of presenting the play and its operatic additions in a way which would seem reasonable to a modern audience. The Cambridge company, under the guidance of Mr. R. J. Dent, solved it by acting Shakespeare's play more or less fully and introducing the operatic scenes at certain points in each act. Thus the cast includes one of actors for all Shakespeare's spoken parts plus the musical cast—a large one—for the masques.

The task of production undertaken by Mr. Olive Carey was therefore a very complicated one, and when it is taken into consideration that practically all the performers—actors, singers, and players in the orchestra—are either members of the university or residents in the town, the courage and skill of those responsible deserve congratulation first of all. But the whole production was of sufficient interest to demand a fuller discussion, which we must reserve till later. Dr. C. B. Rootman conducted the musical performance, having an orchestra of strings, harp, chord, and a few wind instruments such as was usual in Purcell's time. Save for the trumpeters, who struggled hopelessly with Purcell's impossible parts, the orchestra was efficient and contributed to the beauty of the wonderful ensemble numbers. But the chorals was the best part of the musical force. Their clear tone was delightful. What was most important of all was that all combined to enjoy and help the audience to enjoy the infinite varieties of rhythm and melodic line which make the enchantment of Purcell's music.

PURCELL'S "FAIRY QUEEN."

INTERESTING PERFORMANCE AT CAMBRIDGE

By A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

Parcella's "Fairy Queen" is a treasure rescued from the grave. It was performed in 1611, and, thereafter, for more than two centuries, known only in fragments. For the first time after this century, it remained so. In 1880, when the volume was first published, Mr. J. S. Shedd, the liberality of the majority, came upon it by chance in the library of the Royal Academy of Music. It was a romantic and a precious discovery, for of all Parcella's works for the stage it is the widest in its appeal. It is not so large in style nor so technically brilliant as "King Arthur," but in its constant flow of delightful melody, in its exquisite grace of expression, and in its fund of lambent humour, it is an unsurpassable product of its time.

The Purcell Society has republished the classic, but we have had no performance of it yet in town, and it was a happy thought of the music-lovers of the new Cambridge to make its revival their first enterprise. The suggestion, we believe, came from Dr. C. B. Rootham, the well-known organist of St. John's, and conductor of the University Musical Society, and he has had valuable assistance—notably from Mr. Clive Carey as producer, and from Mr. E. J. Dent, by whose advice the music was used in conjunction with the text of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," instead of the mangled Shakespeare of the original libretto.

Not a page of the work is without charm and interest. It plumbs no great depths, yet it is not without a genuine vitality, as in the clear, vigorous duet for two alto, "Let the Pipes and the Clarions." Winter's song, and such fine grand-hoax movements as "O Let Me Weep" and "Thus, Thus the Gloomy World," but the gem is the outstanding characteristic of the music, alike in the little instrumental pieces such as the "Dance of the Followers of the Night," songs like "If Love's a Sweet Passion" and "Here's the Summer," and the exquisite fairy music.

Of the production as a whole it is impossible to speak too highly. The grouping and movements were alike excellent, and the colour schemes worked out with artistic taste. The costumes reflected the greatest credit upon all concerned. The chorus singing was excellent, and as a matter of fact rather better than the solo singing, as in quite a number of cases the principals seemed overpowered by the choir.

The opera allows plenty of scope for dancing, and better work by amateurs has rarely been seen. It was altogether marvellous to find that the same cast sang and danced. Miss Greta Anderson and Miss Joan Reed who gave a most wonderful dance during Act 3.

Of the singing Mr. Robert Mawdsley's tenor voice, cut as a finished professional, whilst Mr. Edward Harman did excellent work as Bottom. The taste of the members in the Oriental passages, with which the opera concludes was very popular.

"COMUS."

Milton's Masque Produced in Morton Hall Garden.

Cambridge, and indeed the realm at large may, with cause, be grateful to a certain small and select circle in the University which has of late years contributed in no small degree to the national revival of medieval and Old English music, dance and masque. It is a revival of which much may be said for, and little against. In practically all of this work brought from out the past there is a flavour of quaintness, a pol-pourri atmosphere of pleasant impossibilities, which in itself is of a sufficient charm and freshness to claim the attention of our sceptic modern palates.

"The" production of the year has, of course, been "The Fairy Queen"—a unique, or collection of musques, which has earned for itself a shrine unique and unchallenged. In comparison "Comus" is but a grain of mustard seed; nevertheless, it is an exquisite miniature, which, if not fully developed, yet contains infinite beauty and a ripe promise. A distinctive feature is the music which is without exception (if we remember aught the date of Bull's "King's Hunting Jigg") of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Its treatment by an orchestra composed principally of strings, flute and harpsichord is, for all practical purposes, faultless. None but that singularly boring and unsatisfactory creature—the "intellectual"—can carp or caw. We were more particularly impressed by an Almain of striking beauty, which recurs several times; a Saraband (Laws), a thing of grace and dignity, and a Lutes Symphony.

The central figure of an amateur cast is Mr. D. D. Arundell (St. John's), producer of the thing, who plays the Attendant Spirit. Mr. Arundell's acting is for all intents and purposes well nigh perfect. Added to a strongly developed, but not over-emphasised, dramatic instinct, he possesses a clearly apparent knowledge of the technique. That, however, is not allowed to swamp the human interest or obtrude itself whatsoever, wherein lies the secret of his success. His limbs, eyes and voice are used in due proportion to the humour of the moment, and thus dominate and really centre the interest of his audience. This, he it remembered, is a task of infinitely more difficulty in the open air than upon a stage. The fact that he had so far gauged the extent of his auditorium as to suit his voice to it in song was a point in itself. The Lady of Miss Enid Hopkinson and the Comus of Mr. J. C. Squire were portrayed with decision and a right amount of imagination. Miss Hopkinson's character is consistent throughout, and breathes reality from beginning to end, Sabina (Miss Joan Reed) is likewise well played, and a graceful little character to boot.

With the First and Second Brothers of Mr. K. Manceloff and Mr. A. E. Maschwitz we were a little disappointed. Were Brother I. to speak his lines with a fuller appreciation of their meaning, and address them rather to Brother I. than to the audience, the effect would carry far more weight and an added sense of reality. Nevertheless, both characters have no easy task to grapple with in a continuous flow of flowery language, which, however much it may embody the beauty of our tongue, yet well-nigh demands to be "parroted"—a pitfall into which nine out of ten amateurs invariably descend headlong. Both Ruth Corcor and Mr. P. V. Moscovsky contrived with effect to "look" their inarticulate parts—a task, after all, not of the easiest.

Of several graceful dances, we liked in particular the Morris and Stately dancers. It is curious how in Old English dancing children alone invariably outline their stiffer-jointed elders. The explanation probably lies in their utter freedom from self-consciousness and fresher joy in life. "Shooting" we have seen danced on several occasions, but seldom, if ever, better than by the young dancers whom the producers of "Gunga" have collected. Their version was, with one or two small and quite desirable flaws, as near perfection as one may desire. The "atmosphere" was created which, after all, the main thing.

the direction of Henry Lawes in 1634, is a classical allegory, developed into what is almost a play. It was last performed at the New Theatre, Cambridge, on July 10th, 1908, upon the occasion of the Milton Tercentenary. It will be performed again to-night and to-morrow night, at 5 p.m., in the garden of Merton Hall (Northampton-street)—a singularly suitable setting.

The marriage of Mr. Guy Philip Lankester to Miss Roberta Eunson unites two of our leading local families and a couple who were playmates in childhood. Both are only children and did good work during the war. The bride, who is the daughter of Lieut. Colonel G. S. Eunson, D.L. and Mrs. Eunson, M.B.E., of Abington Hill, was a valued V.A.D. worker. Mr. Lankester, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Lankester, served with the Northampton Territorials on Gallipoli, and in Egypt and Palestine. He was promoted to the Divisional Staff and retired this year with the rank of Major. His love of mechanics has led him to take up engineering studies with a firm at Ipswich.

The wedding ceremony, which was attended by a large number of relatives and friends, took place at Abington Church on Thursday, the officiating clergyman being the Rev. E. C. Aldred (Rector) and the Rev. G. C. Lunt, M.C., Vicar of All Saints'. The church was tastefully decorated with palms and flowers and the service was fully choral. The bride, who was given away by her father, was becomingly attired in white lace and satin with lace train trimmed with orange blossoms. Her three attendants presented a picturesque appearance. Miss Elsie Fordyce was in buttercup yellow, circé lace, over satin, with brown lace hat, and the trainbearers, Misses Joyce Batten and Joan Dorman, wore white net dresses with yellow sashes and net caps trimmed with buttercups. The best man was Mr. G. St. G. Rands. A reception was held at Abington Hill and the happy pair left during the afternoon for London en route for Newquay. The bride's going away dress was of dark blue embroidered glaze silk with scarlet hat and ermine stole. After the honeymoon they will reside at Ipswich until Mr. Lankester has completed his engineering course.

The esteem enjoyed by both was reflected in the large array of beautiful presents. Earl Spencer, who was present, sent a pendant, the employees of Messrs. Lankester & Wells a handsome cut glass and silver mounted bowl with solid silver servers, the bridegroom's parents a cheque, the bride's parents a canteen of silver, the Gas Co. employees case of fish knives and forks and bread fork.

The present of the bride to the bridegroom was a silver cigarette case and the bridegroom's gift was a tortoiseshell and silver toilet set.

THE PRINCE AT DELHI.

EDWARD VII. STATUE
UNVEILED.

STRIKING CEREMONY.

[FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENTS.]

DISTILL. FRG. 16

Large crowds again assembled to see the Prince of Wales drive to the unveiling of the All India Memorial Statue to Edward VII. It was a fine, impressive ceremony, the speeches both of the Viceroy and the Prince being pitched in a lofty tone and bearing witness to King Edward's virtues and affection for India. The bronze equestrian statue is placed on a high red sandstone pedestal and is distinctly good, and the whole spectacle, with the glittering staffs and double guard of honour of the Seaford and Gushins and the massed spectators, was very striking.

In regard to the crowds which welcomed the Prince yesterday, authoritative figures place the total number at over 160,000 Indians, of whom over 40,000 were from Delhi city. In connection with the abandonment of the Aerial (day of mourning), which I reported yesterday, I understand that Mr. Gandhi himself was appealed to and replied that there should be no Aerial unless it was necessary. The leaders here gladly decided that it was not necessary, so, though most of the ships were shut, the people seized the opportunity to see the Prince. To-day there was Aerial and everything is now

Last night the Prince had a quiet dinner, which was confined to the Viceroy's house party, and an informal dance afterwards. The house party included the Countess of Hardwicke, Lord and Lady Montagu of Beaulieu, the Hon. Mrs. Ronald Greville, Miss Ashley, General and Lady Birdwood, and Admiral Clinton-Baker.

This afternoon the polo matches for the Ratham Cup were played. A State banquet at the Viceregal Lodge will be given tonight.

FOLK-SONG OPERA

"The Two Sisters" at Cambridge.

FROM THE MOUNTAINS

CAMBRIDGE, England

Once again Cambridge offers something out of the common for its annual opera production. For the first time, but certainly not for the last, folk-song and story are used in a modern British opera. As I pointed out in my message of yesterday, the basis of "The Two Sisters" is ancient legend, which is used both for the story and its embellishment.

The author of the book, Mrs. Farnsett, has ingeniously combined the various versions, drawing chiefly on the Scottish form known as "The Two Sisters of Binnrie." The composer, Dr. Cyril Robinson, has also incorporated in his score two of the most distinctive of the tunes to which the ballad is sung. One, with its recurring refrain of "Edithore!" and "Staring for aye," and its strong suggestion of the pentatonic scale, is full of Northern quality and tragedy, and is well known, while the second, a less familiar tune from Berkshire, is a typical English folk-song with a bold design and a lift all its own.

All through the story these are, their cadences, and their characteristic intonations keep cropping up, imparting a British idiom that, like the music in the string, is unexpressed, animated, the whole. The music is certainly good, but not so good a character that I have noticed with before in modern British opera. It lacks nothing in massedness or resource, and is decidedly dramatic at the proper moments.

Though this is a "ballad" opera, it is not of the order represented by the older English examples, which consist of a string of songs; the musical design is continuous, and its variety is remarkable. Save in its general aspect, which, of course, views common ground, there is very little reference to existing examples. This I ascribe to the fact that the representative folk songs and their distinctive and individual character constitute a natural call for distinctive and individual treatment.

LEADS THEM

A beginning is made with the delivery of the original basket in extenso by the Harpist. Then the illustration of the story follows. We are shown the jealousy of Ellen, secreted to Rainsford, of her sister Annet. Next we are shown the storm surrounding the winter, to which Ellen drags Annet and drowns her. A section follows in which the tree trunk comes to life and parley with the River Maidens, imparting a mysticism to the story that takes things out of the commonplace, and also gives the composer an opportunity for melody and successful illustration. A different spirit marks the next scene of the people assembling for the wedding. A genuine English folk-song is introduced, a new atmosphere pervades, the music is British both, and the scene makes excellent contrast. Then after a Prelude cleverly built on the Berkshire folk-tune, the wedding scene is unfolded, and the tragedy revealed by the Harp, which, string with the line of the drowned girl, tells of her tragic end at the hands of the jealous lover. All stages of the story are faithfully reflected in the music. The composer reaches decided heights of imagination in the scene between the Trees and the River Maidens, and he shows his versatility by speaking in a wholly different style in the lighter portions of the assembly for the wedding.

The scenery and costumes have been designed by Mr. Lionel Pearson and executed on the spot. The scenery is imaginative in its perspective, held in its softening, impressionistic, but not futuristic, style. The dances, too, have been specially arranged, the Cambridge branch of the English Folk Dance Society being responsible for some and Miss Greta Thornely for the others. The professor is Mr. Dennis Arundell, who has worked with a will that has got its effect. The chore, which has some difficult music to sing, is excellent, the men as the Trees being particularly rousing and round in tone. The orchestra, largely amateur, was splendid.

For the principal characters professional aid has been sought. The Ellen is Miss Gladys Meyer, who seems to be of the drama in ordinary to British composers, since she has created so many of their roles. This is one of her most interesting and exacting efforts. Miss Dorothy Campbell, Glue as the Annet shows marked ability for stage work, and as a result her efforts told well. Mr. Olive Carey, associated with so many Cambridge operas, is Russell, not a strongly defined figure. As the Harper, the instrument of Fate, Mr. Stewart Wilson employed an unappreciated quality of tone that effectively depicted the part of its colour. The task of all the singers was naturally difficult as the ground was unfamiliar, but their indifferent diction destroyed the possibility of enabling the audience to hear what they were saying. With but intermittent articulation it was almost impossible to follow the story from the words sung on the stage. The result was only a partial realization of the real effect of what is actually a notable work. The composer conducted.

"THE TWO SISTERS."

DR. ROOTHAM'S OPERA AT CAMBRIDGE

[FROM OUR JOURNAL CORRESPONDENT.]

CAMBRIDGE, Eng. 14.

Members of the University of Cambridge have given several productions of opera in the past, notably The Magic Flute and The Merry Queen, and it was to some extent the same members of the University who were concerned in the production to-night of a three-act opera by one of their number in the new theatre. This was Dr. Cyril Roachman's The Two Nations.

The ballad "Two Sisters of Dinnor," on which it is founded, and which was sung by way of prelude by Mr. Dennis Arundell to-night, is very well known. Mr. Arundell, who also produced the opera, has pointed out in an ably-written article that the story is common to the folklore of many nations, and is found in so many parts of the world that it cannot be considered to be of Scottish origin. This justifies the librettist and composer in dissociating it from any local tradition. The whole setting is, in fact, independent of time and place, and the imaginative scenes of Mr. Lionel Feenore helped to emphasize the fact.

At first sight the ballet seems to offer ideal material for an opera, the directly human story which moves the dancer in the plain setting of a room, the essence of the ballet form, and that the operatic stage needs and rarely gets. Here we have his story. The knight rescues the sister, dances to the tune of the sword, and the sister is saved. The sister takes her revenge by growing the yucca in the river. Her crime is absconded by the magic of the Harp, who strong with life, with the dead girl's hair. When he touches his harp the strings vibrate in the tones of her voice, and declare the truth. "There stands my sister, who drowned in a"

What the ballet tells impressively the opera must tell personally. It has to enable us to see the drive of passion and impulse behind the basic facts, to build up the individual characters, and make us realize the inevitable result of their conduct. This is what the librettist (Margery Fennell) and the composer have tried to do, but succeed in doing only at moments. If they have not succeeded further it is from want of experience of what things will have that result on the stage. They succeed best with the character of the elder sister (Ellen), played vigorously by Miss Gladys Mages, who tells verbatim her own actions and voice, and makes the most effective and strongly characteristic music. The others, however, Annet, the younger sister, and Rainsford, the Knight, played by Miss Dorothy Campbell Giles and Mr. Clive Gurney, remain shadowy. The librettist has given them little to do, and the composer's music, even if it is due to his inexperience rather than to emotionality. There is a great deal of commentary, which, instead of pointing the main issues of the story, rather clouds them. When Ellen discovers the lovers, instead of the dramatic climax expected, she merely proposes to take them away for a while, by the river and tells Rainsford that he need not trouble to attend them, since they are quite used to being out late at night.

Arline in the second act, when she has barged Annet away, the voices of the wood discuss the storm quarrel adversely. The river gods, singing a ballet, the Harper talks about his age, and the Rhine's hands and signs with him. In fact, the whole is much hampered by obvious shortcomings of the drama. Nevertheless it is a notable work of work in its way. There is a charming, imaginative quality in many of the episodes, and the symbolism, using the melody of the ballad, is rather salient themes of his own associated with the principal characters, has made some fine music for voices and instruments. The chorus of wood and water folk in Act 2 and the dance of the celestials outside the Castle in Act 3 are comparatively good musical features. The Harper's songs, Mr. Stuart Wilson has done in lyrical moments, and there is a special feeling in the way the ballet turns upon the form.

But perhaps the most important thing to be mentioned here is the fact that this production, like its predecessor, is the work of wonderful cooperation among a number of good people. Everything practically has been done in Cambridge; the scenes painted, the costumes designed and made, the dances arranged by the members of the Cambridge branch of the English Folk Dance Society, and the songs picked up by our beautiful soprano of the corporation. The costumes, songs and most of the dances are new, and the performance, while the company's rendition was a very admirable one, though there were naturally some details, especially in the orchestral parts, which the later performances of the work may improve. The whole was very artistically conceived, and its execution was well deserved, quite apart from the demands of national patriotism.

THE marriage took place yesterday, at St. Giles', Cambridge, of Mr. Angus Campbell Walker, M.C., M.A., of the Sudan Political Service (late Temporary Lieut.-Colonel R.F.A.), only son of the late Dr. Norman Walker, of Stalham, Norfolk, and Mrs. T. H. Woolston, of Northampton, and Miss Elsie Margaret Fordyce, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Fordyce, of Cambridge.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of ivory silk marocain and lace, with a lace train and an embroidered silk net veil (which was worn by her grandmother). She carried a shower bouquet of cream roses, lilies of the valley and white heather, and wore a spray of orange-blossom worn by Queen Victoria at her wedding. She was attended by two train-bearers, Miss Rosemary Tabrum and Miss Joan Tabrum (nieces of the bride) in ivory organdie muslin, and two bridesmaids, Miss Dorothy Govan and Miss Lilla Hird, in cinnamon silk georgette, each carrying a sheaf of roses. They all wore ivory necklaces, the gifts of the bridegroom.

Dr. Valentine Blake, of Great Yarmouth, was best man. The officiating clergyman was the Vicar (the Rev. W. V. Mason) and the service was fully choral.

A reception was held at 61, Chesterton Road, Cambridge, after which the bride and bridegroom left for the honeymoon, which will be spent motor-ing in Cornwall. Mrs. Walker wearing a beige-coloured three-piece suit and a brown hat trimmed with an ostrich feather, and white fox fur.

INTERESTING WEDDING.

Walker—Fordyce.

Much interest was evinced in the wedding, which took place at St. Giles' Church, Cambridge, this (Tuesday) afternoon, of Miss Elsie Margaret Fordyce, younger daughter of Coun- cillor and Mrs. B. E. Fordyce, of 61, Chester- ton-road, Cambridge, to Mr. Angus Campbell Walker, M.C., M.A., only son of the late Dr. Norman Walker, of Stalham, Norfolk. The bridegroom, who was late Temporary Lieut. Colonel of the R.F.A., is now connected with the Sudan Political Service.

The Vicar (the Rev. W. V. Mason) officiated, and the service was fully choral. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of ivory silk marocain and lace, with a lace train and an embroidered silk net veil (which was worn by her grandmother). She carried a shower bouquet of cream roses, lilies of the valley, and white heather, and wore a spray of orange blossom worn by Queen Victoria at her wedding. She was attended by two train-bear- ers, the Misses Rosemary and Joan Tabram (nieces of the bride), in ivory organdie muslin, and two bridesmaids, Miss Dorothy Govan and Miss Lilla Hird, in cinnamon silk georgette, each carrying a sheaf of roses. They all wore ivory necklaces, the gifts of the bridegroom. Dr. Valentine Blake, of Great Yarmouth, was best man.

After the service a reception was held at 61, Chesterton-road, Cambridge, and later the bride and bridegroom left for the honeymoon, which will be spent motoring in Cornwall. Mrs. Walker travelled in a beige-coloured three-piece suit and a brown hat trimmed with an ostrich feather, and white fox fur.

There were many beautiful presents.
